DC Hunt

by Ucaoimhu

In this puzzle, certain clues are what I call "DC clues" — DD (double definition) clues in which the answers to the two halves don't quite match. Specifically, one answer will contain a sequence of letters not found in the other (italicized tagging after the clue applies to the longer answer). Each such sequence must be entered in the grid in a single square (which will always be a "checked" square); these squares, all put together, form the quarry of the titular DC Hunt.

The unclued phrase at 1 Across and 44 Across, on the other hand, tells what is in these squares individually. In addition, it tells what I am hoping to encounter, conditionswise, at the Washington Post Hunt (poised as it is between frigid MIT and sweltering Miami).
