Off To Washington
by Ucaoimhu

Yeah, it’s another inaugural puzzle. Specifically, to show you how to get to the site where the inauguration took place, most clues here have a wordplay part yielding a letter sequence that does not quite match the answer, in one of the following ways:

(1) For some clues, the wordplay leaves out a letter. Your route involves five paths hidden (horizontally, vertically, and diagonally) in the grid; if you circle the omitted letters, they will show your starting point, and each intersection where you switch paths. (The order in which your route hits these letters is not the obvious “spelling” order.)

(2) For some clues, the wordplay yields an extra letter, in one of four possible positions. For each such position, the extra letters in that position (in clue order) will spell a word; these words, in pairs, will name two intermediate stops you might have to make if you were to go by rail instead of following the route from (1). (The position numbers for each pair are appropriate to the corresponding stop.)

(3) For some clues, the wordplay gives one letter incorrectly. The incorrect letters, in clue order, will give the address number of the inauguration site; the correct letters will give its name.

The remaining clues all work normally, but each of their answers must be entered with one of three synonymous letter sequences deleted; if you take the nth letter of each such clue, where n is the length of the deleted sequence, these letters (in clue order) will describe one final distance you would have to cross to get to the inauguration in question.
