

I'll Have One Of Those

by Ucaomihu

In this puzzle, each Across clue has a different extraneous letter, which must be removed before solving; correspondingly, each such letter must be added to one Down clue before solving that. When the grid is complete, the unclued entry at 22 Down will indicate one matched Down-Across pair; phonetically, the middlemost words of those Down and Across clues will identify the drink to the right (with its three, stealthily-labeled layers), or state something our hostess (or the clues, or the letters in any layer) will do.

For those preferring a less layered drink, ten servings of a very tasty one appear in the grid, tilted at assorted jaunty angles, and forming five pairs, each entirely in one layer. Each pair encodes one letter; for those unfamiliar with the coding system, this same letter also appears at the pair's "pivot point". For each Across entry, where its extraneous letter is in its nth word, write the nth letter of its answer both (1) under its extraneous letter in the chart below, and (2) beside the corresponding Down clue. The letters from (1) will say what the five pairs would form if treated phonetically; those from (2) will further explain what each of the servings is, and will also give an appropriate message.
