

Oh, the Places You'll Go!

by Ucaoimhu

This puzzle is written in the spirit of moving forward in a graduated way. Specifically, in twenty of the clues, the string of letters clued by the cryptic part differs from the answer by having one letter replaced by a string of one or more letters indicating compass directions (N, S, E, or W). For each such clue, after entering the answer (normally) in the grid, you can make a (nonbacktracking) "journey" by starting at the replaced letter and moving from square to square in the directions indicated by the sequence of direction letters; draw a line connecting the centers of the starting and ending squares of this journey.

When all of these lines have been drawn, the resulting image will indicate something about an event scheduled for later tonight, which will provide a nice contrast for all of these moves. Read the letters in the final squares of the journeys, in clue order, to see what that event will consist of.
