

Every Five's a Critic

by Ucaaimhu

In this cryptic, all Across clues work normally and their answers are entered normally. However, most of the Down answers must be altered before entry; as a tribute to four pairs of Best Picture nominees, (1) five will orbit a measured amount (one way or the other), (2) five will get Greek-like, (3) five will be fraudulent with an NY twist, and (4) five will be under Lincoln. (Altered entries will include an NI3 form and three proper names.) The five remaining Down answers will be entered normally, but in each of their clues the wordplay yields a letter sequence that is missing two letters; shade the corresponding two squares in the grid. Together, these shaded grid squares will name a noted film critic, and (in code) that critic's pick for the Best Picture of 2013; the unclued Down entry on the left side of the grid will name another (unnominated) 2013 film that that critic really liked, and the one on the right will say what these two critical favorites have in common.
